

CASE-01

Behavioral Summary

Metric	Value
Total posts collected	209.0
Data span days	73.0
Posting frequency per day	2.85
Late night post ratio	47%
Avg sentiment score	0.2
Negative post ratio	31%
First person pronoun ratio	3%
Mental health subreddit ratio	0%
Unique subreddits visited	24

Sample Posts

Post 1 | 2025-09-06 13:48 UTC | r/BPD | comment | ↑ 4

It sounds like you're fixated on proving you're worthy of being loved by somebody to such a degree that you want to be able to show legal proof of it. I don't know who you feel you have to prove this to, but you shouldn't have to prove that to anybody. Either way though, if that is your goal, then this is not the man to do this with. Everything you've said about him is screaming he just uses women for sex and has no intention of settling down to get married. He may even say he does, but pay atte

Post 2 | 2025-09-06 14:11 UTC | r/BPD | comment | ↑ 2

Because people like this don't want to get married, they just want the sex with no strings attached. They don't care about what you want or your feelings, they only care about what they want. And they definitely don't want to get married. I mean look at him, he already had two chances to get married and he didn't. He didn't even get married and leave, he just left. It's what he does, and it's what so many other men do too because it works for them. If they can't get what they want from you anymo

Post 3 | 2025-09-06 17:03 UTC | r/BPD | comment | ↑ 1

I had a pretty good 10 years there. Successful career, plenty of money, got married, had kids. People thought I really had my shit together and saw me as a solid, dependable guy. And I started to see myself that way too, but only if I hid my feelings.

But then, because I felt like it was all "fake" in a way, a lot of my old feelings came back with a vengeance. It was because I only had the illusion of being happy with myself instead of actually being happy with my true self. After that I pretty

Post 4 | 2025-09-08 04:35 UTC | r/BPD | comment | ↑ 3

Sounds like a FP attachment formed, and that's going to be your number one risk whenever opening your relationship with a person with BPD to poly. It's also why I really recommend against it unless the person with BPD is highly self aware and has a good handle on setting boundaries in order to prioritize your relationship. If she was actually ready to handle poly she would have broken it off with the other person at the very first signs of FP attachment. In my last relationship we opened it up t

Post 5 | 2025-10-12 16:26 UTC | r/BPD | comment | ↑ 1

They can work for adhd if you need to focus on specific things like school or work and struggle with your mind wandering inconsistently. However, if you have anxiety adhd medications can make it worse and if you have depression you can start depending on them to lift your mood instead of managing focus. I take a mild dose of both an adhd medication and ssri and it helps to attain a balance for my adhd, but still not perfect. It also doesn't do shit for my BPD though. Only therapy and learning to

Post 6 | 2025-10-21 22:53 UTC | r/BPD | comment | ↑ 1

Exercise is extremely helpful for me to keep my mood more even and it gives me a feeling of accomplishment, like something I can be proud of myself for doing. But as you and everybody else is saying it's really the motivation that's the challenge. For me it's way easier to do it when I'm in more of an anxious or calm state, but if I'm at all down or depressed all motivation goes right out the window. And this is really annoying because I know if I can manage to work out it will actually help pul

Post 7 | 2025-10-25 18:47 UTC | r/BPD | comment | ↑ 3

Weed can help anxiety to a point, but it can also cause paranoia if you use it too much, and that can lead to even more anxiety.

Post 8 | 2025-11-06 03:56 UTC | r/BPD | comment | ↑ 1

This can happen with BPD and splitting. When they start feeling anxiety about losing you they reach out basically to check if you're still there. Once they get the reassurance they need they disappear again because the anxiety is relieved. Might not even respond. It sucks if you're on the other end of this, so if it's bothering you then don't feel too obligated to respond.
