

CASE-07

Behavioral Summary

Metric	Value
Total posts collected	39.0
Data span days	32.0
Posting frequency per day	1.16
Late night post ratio	47%
Avg sentiment score	0.1
Negative post ratio	34%
First person pronoun ratio	9%
Mental health subreddit ratio	26%
Unique subreddits visited	16

Sample Posts

Post 1 | 2025-10-07 21:50 UTC | r/HealthAnxiety | post | ↑ 1

Death anxiety is not what I want to cope with [removed]

Post 2 | 2025-10-11 21:48 UTC | r/Anxiety | comment | ↑ 2

I'm sorry that you have to deal with all the health issues. Sometimes I'm suicidal too and it so hard to cope with those two but at the same time they never occur at the same moment. Do you experience that?

Post 3 | 2025-10-12 21:03 UTC | r/ExistentialJourney | comment | ↑ 1

Well it do sound a bit more intelligent■

What I really meant was how do you cope with the feeling/panic/anxiety you get when you sit with the thought of not existing any more

Post 4 | 2025-10-17 14:35 UTC | r/thanatophobia | comment | ↑ 1

Yes I hear you and I'm also scared. It's a good thing that you wrote this here. You've told us how you feel and what you think about this topic. It's still a taboo to talk about for most people. We don't want to be sad or experience pain so we avoid what we can avoid. But I think we should open up(like you do) and talk more.

I don't know what can help you but if you have a therapist it feels good to know you can actually meet someone who'll listen to you. I made a journal that has helped me a

Post 5 | 2025-10-18 10:39 UTC | r/thanatophobia | post | ↑ 6

Do you think this is a stupid way to try to heal myself? I've had thanatophobia since I was 6 years old. My grandmother died and no one talked to me about it. My parents didn't let me participate in the funeral. In bed at night I was thinking about death, and anxiety exploded in my body. I screamed and cried and wanted to wake up from the nightmare, but it wasn't a nightmare it's was reality. And it sucked and it still sucks.

After surviving breast cancer three times, it became unbearable.
The

Post 6 | 2025-10-19 19:15 UTC | r/CancerFamilySupport | post | ↑ 9

My mum got throat cancer and I dissociated Some 25 years ago my mum got throat cancer. I got completely numb and didn't know how to handle this. During her treatment I had trouble seeing her and comforting her. I totally dissociated. To this day I have few memories from the periode when she was sick. I feel guilty for not being able to take care of her at the time and that I was absent. I have to tell you she's fine today living with her share of aftermath and we have a really good realationship

Post 7 | 2025-10-27 21:34 UTC | r/thanatophobia | comment | ↑ 3

I wrote this text on Medium, about my own experience as a six-year-old on this topic:

I was six when I realized I would die. My parents never talked about it.

I was six years old when reality hit me for the first time. My grandmother died. A woman I deeply loved. She had a brain hemorrhage and was eventually placed in a nursing home. My mother and I visited her there, but she could no longer hold a conversation. Then one day it was over. She was gone.

This was many years ago now, so I can't

Post 8 | 2025-11-05 13:03 UTC | r/norge | comment | ↑ 11

Det er kanskje på tide at du forteller hvordan du har det. At du er sliten, og at selv om hun har bursdag så er du fremdeles sliten. Ja det er sikkert kjedelig for henne, men dere kan jo ta igjen denne dagen du er opplagt og er ferdig med eksamen? At hun blir snurt på deg sier mer om henne enn om deg. Så stå i det og si sannheten. I dag er du i ræva form og du orker ikke så mye, det hadde du vært i dag uansett om hun har bursdag eller ikke.
Lykke til.
